D100: MIGHTY MEALS OVERVIEW

Table Use

This table is presented in a D100 rollable format. Looking for a quick random fantasy meal on the fly? Roll a percentile die or two D10s and combine their numbers to find your meal quickly.

The table is split into 5 rarities - Common, Uncommon, Rare, Very Rare and Legendary, with each containing 20 meals. You can alternatively, choose a rarity first and roll a d20 to determine the meal.

Lastly, feel free to simply choose a meal that's relevant to your situation from the list. These meals serve as excellent roleplay and immersion tools when running a campaign.

TTRPGs and Worlds

You may notice the foods on these tables can be vague on certain ingredients, the creatures used to make the meals or the cultures they are designed for. This is intentional by design. Not all worlds have dwarves or elves and not all worlds have cows or chickens so apply your own worlds take on these foods where necessary. The variety is broad yet specific enough that dishes should fall into the relevant cultures and societies with ease.

This table is also entirely system agnostic, meaning it can be used for any fantasy TTRPG with very minimal tweaking required. Food effects may require the GM to implement their own dice checks or rulesets relevant to their game, should they choose to use them.

Food Effects

Each meal in the table is depicted with a side effect of some kind. Some are harmless or sensory, whereas others are powerful and affect the character or those around them in certain conditions. Your GM should determine whether these effects are relevant to the situation and whether or not they should be used, including if they require any dice checks or give relevant mechanical or numerical bonuses.

Remember these food effects are OPTIONAL. Feel free to serve these meals without the added bonuses or negatives.

Character Diets

Some character's in your game may have special dietary requirements or preferences based on their lifestyle, choices or even religion. Whilst not always possible, most meals have been designed to be just vague enough for GM tweaking as required. Feel free to cater to these needs and offer your players options, such as vegetarian or vegan alternatives.

Sides and Customisation

Many of the foods depicted have a core focus on one particular aspect of the meal, usually being it's main ingredient. Whilst strong enough on their own, this leaves room for the GM to add in their own choices of sides, dips or any other additional extras if they feel the food requires it. Common meal supplements include condiments or smaller sides, such as fries, salads or beans. There are even foods within these lists that could be served together as a main and a side.

Food Culture and Prep

Dishes and their preparation may differ from culture to culture, so experiment with different styles of cooking and serving. One location might serve a fish deep fried, whereas others may grill or sear the same meal. Some may even regard fish as a sacred animal, making it's preparation more spiritual or religious. In the same regard, many dishes may be exclusive to certain regions or cultures, which will help enhance immersion and give identity to locations within your world. You might find certain meals in these lists fit some of your cultures better than others. If this is the case, try highlighting this as a feature to help that environment bloom and feel more believable. There might be only one place in your world that serves a certain dish and perhaps that dish is a certain characters favourite, giving them reason to visit or seek out the particular meal.

94	Dark Matter	Raw lumps of powerful dark energy served on a silver platter, this dish is perilous for most to consume. Its allure lies in its mystery and danger, alongside the potential power it may grant to the brave.	Potentially fatal. Your body emanates a horrifying aura which darkens the room.
95	Lover's Strand	A long, uncuttable woven spaghetti strand with two ends that must be eaten simultaneously. If not consumed together, the pasta becomes unchewable, drawing the two diners closer as they share an increasingly intimate experience.	A loving bond is created between those who share this dish.
96	The Empty Plate	An invisible dish of meat and vegetables served on an ornate plate. The dish is regularly garnished with herbs and salt during consumption to allow perception of it's shape and to help with eating.	You turn invisible until the next morning.
97	Sweet Release	A deep sapphire-blue soup that provides a warmth beyond that of the hottest forge. Each spoonful soothes the soul and allows the mind to drift effortlessly away from heartache with its delicate sweetness.	Lifts the burden of an unwanted memory or trauma from your brain.
98	Golden Goose	An unbelievably rare creature comprised of golden features. Those who witness it's existence see brief moments from their life as sudden visions. It's golden feathers are removed carefully during preparation before it's perfect meat is roasted and served.	Your entire life flashes before your eyes. Literally.
99	Memoria Fruit	A beautiful reminder of a once terrible war. This sparkling green crystalised fruit is easily mistaken for an exquisite jewel. It's soft yet glass-like texture smashes and melts in your mouth with each bite, releasing it's irresistible juices. Easily tainted once picked, it's normally kept within an airtight container and eaten by hand with a special pair of gloves.	A flavour so pure and life changing, it leaves one pursuing its taste forever.
